

CLAIMS

What is claimed is:

1. A dinner service pad, including a plurality of support sticks integrally woven with a woven fabric to provide a piece of decoration article wherein the support sticks are equidistantly wrapped in place by the woven fabric thereof, and an adhesive layer is coated at the upper and lower surfaces of the decoration article thereon respectively, securely binding together the weaving spots of the woven fabric and each support stick thereof to form a rigid and solid piece of the decoration article that is further cut into specific dinner pads via molds of different shapes; thus, via the weaving texture of the woven fabric, the dinner pad thereof is equipped with artistic diagrams of rich colors and three-dimensional effect at the upper and lower surfaces thereon, and via the support sticks and the adhesive layers, the woven fabric is prevented from getting loose yarns in the cutting operation thereof; besides, the adhesive layers thereof can also refrain the support sticks and the woven fabric of the dinner pad from directly contacting with the dinnerware so as to avoid the damage of friction in use; in case food or gravy spills over onto the dinner pad thereof, the adhesive layers thereof can prevent food or gravy from getting inside to the support sticks and the woven fabric thereof, precisely protecting the upper and lower surfaces of the dinner pad thereof, and tissue is simply applied onto the adhesive layers to clean up the dinner pad in an easy and fast manner, facilitating the convenience of the dinner pad in practical use and cleaning up thereof.

2. The dinner service pad as claimed in Claim 1 wherein the support sticks thereof can be made of bamboo materials.

3. The dinner service pad as claimed in Claim 1 wherein the adhesive layer thereof can be made of food-used and transparent fastening agent.

4. The dinner service pad as claimed in Claim 1 wherein the support sticks thereof can be mutually juxtaposed and equidistantly woven with the woven fabric to provide an integral piece of the decoration article thereof.

5. The dinner service pad as claimed in Claim 1 wherein each support stick can also be individually arranged in equal space from the others and integrally woven with the woven fabric to form the decoration article thereof.

6. The dinner service pad as claimed in Claim 1 wherein the support sticks thereof can also be equidistantly arranged in pairs and integrally woven with the woven fabric to form the decoration article thereof.